Mountie sues RCMP over alleged attacks

Multi-million lawsuit.

Woman who dreamed as a girl of joining force's Musical Ride says she was sexually assaulted, dragged through feces

A Mountie who was once part of the famed Musical Ride is suing the police force, alleging she was sexually assaulted, harassed, repeatedly doused in cold water and dragged through horse feces by colleagues.

In a statement of claim filed in Ontario Superior Court, Staff Sgt. Caroline O'Farrell and her lawyers say the cruelty she suffered in the 1980s left her with post-traumatic stress, led to a marriage breakdown and stunted her prospects with the force.

"The events on the Musical Ride are responsible for stalling Caroline's career at the RCMP," says the claim.

O'Farrell, 52, argues an internal investigation at the time substantiated more than 100 instances of harassment but no real action was taken by her supervisors.

"Some of the harassers received informal discipline (counselling and warnings); others received no form of censure at all," says the statement.

The lawsuit, which names the force and several current and former Mounties, says many of O'Farrell's tormentors continue to work in the RCMP today, some in senior positions.

O'Farrell, who still serves with the RCMP, is seeking millions of dollars in damages for assault, sexual assault, infliction of mental suffering, loss of income and pension entitlement, and breach of contract.

The allegations have not been proved in court and the RCMP has yet to respond.

The statement says O'Farrell was repeatedly subjected to a ritual known as horse-troughing — grabbed by the arms and legs, sprayed with cold water, then dragged face-down through riding-school shavings mixed with manure and urine. Members then kick the mixture onto the subject's head so that it cakes onto their body.

The hazing had happened to other members in the past, but had been discontinued many years before, the claim adds.

On one 1987 bus ride, says the statement, a member used his finger to simulate a penis protruding from the fly of a pair of pants, rubbing it against her head as she slept while another member videotaped the incident.

The statement also alleges bullying and sabotage.

Hutt said wife was burned in drunken fire-pit fall, jury hears

First-degree murder trial. Police testify victim was found with swollen face, burns to body and bruises under each eye

JOE LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

The man accused of killing Donna Jones told police she fell in a fire pit in Cornwall during a business trip and refused to get medical treatment for her burns and subsequent injuries before she died, an Ottawa jury was told Tuesday.

Witnesses testifying in the Mark Hutt trial said the accused told them his wife was out of town when she sustained several burns to her body, which police later found on a mattress in the couple's Barwell Avenue home Dec. 6, 2009.

Hutt has pleaded guilty to criminal negligence causing death, but the Crown wants a jury to convict him of first-degree murder. He is accused of scalding Jones with boiling water and leaving her to die in their basement.

Paramedic Logan Martin,

one of the first responders to the home, said Jones' injuries were so severe she couldn't even try to resuscitate her.

Martin told the jury she was dispatched to the home at 9:19 a.m. and when she arrived she saw Jones' lifeless body sprawled on the mattress. Rigor mortis had already set in, which prevented her from gaining access to the airway and checking her pupils because her eyes were shut, she said.

"I couldn't even pry the teeth apart," said Martin, adding Jones was full of open wounds. "It was hard to grasp (that) she lay without medical treatment for so long."

When Logan told Hutt his wife was dead he became hysterical and started yelling as he ran downstairs from the living room on the main floor, the court heard.

In court, Det. Tara Anderson said Hutt told her Jones got drunk while on a three-day conference with her coworkers in Cornwall and she had fallen into a fire pit. When she got home, she refused to see a doctor for her burns because she hated hospitals, the detective recalled Hutt telling her.

"My first impression was this was not a natural death," said Anderson.

'Suicide contagion' lasts years: Study

Teens who had a schoolmate die by suicide are more likely to consider or attempt taking their own lives than those who haven't lost a peer to suicide — and the fallout can be longer lasting than once thought, a study suggests.

That effect, known as "suicide contagion," can last two years or longer, researchers reported Tuesday in the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

The findings are based on 1998-2007 data from a biennial Statistics Canada survey of more than 22,000 children aged 12 to 17 from across the country.

Researchers found the suicide of a schoolmate magnifies the risk of suicidality for adolescents, even if they didn't personally know the young person who died.

"One of the questions they were asked was 'Have you seriously considered attempting suicide in the last year?'" said senior author Ian Colman, Canada Research Chair in Mental Health Epidemiology at the University of Ottawa.

"And that's a pretty serious indication of suicidal thinking. These aren't casual thoughts."

The contagion effect was most pronounced among the youngest survey respondents.

The study found 12- to 13-year-olds were five times more likely to have thoughts of ending their lives if a schoolmate died by suicide compared to those who weren't exposed to suicide (15 per cent versus three per cent).

Among those in this age group, 7.5 per cent attempted to take their own lives after a schoolmate's suicide compared with 1.7 per cent who had not had a peer die that way.

Teens 14 to 15 were almost three times more likely to have suicidal thoughts, while 16- to 17-year-olds were twice as likely.

Researchers don't know why those 12 to 13 are so vulnerable, but Colman suspects the baseline proportion of youngsters that age contemplating suicide is low.

Stabbing of 20-year-old

Man accused of attempted murder appears in court

The man charged with attempted murder in the stabbing of 20-year-old Michael Wassill appeared in court last week by video remand to hear a justice of the peace name 20 people he is prohibited from speaking to as the investigation continues.

Last Thursday, the Ottawa police's east district charged Carson Morin, 20, after officers responded to a stabbing.

Michael Wassill had his throat slashed with a metal blade in the incident as he tried to protect a female friend from a man who had allegedly been stalking her, according to the victim's uncle, Paul Champ.

Morin's court appearance comes as Wassill is clinging to life in hospital with irreversible brain damage from his injuries, according to Champ. Champ told Metro on Monday that doctors don't expect Wassill to survive.

Morin's next court appearance is scheduled for May 28 by video. JOE LOFARO/METRO

Arson investigation

Restaurant goes up in smoke

Arson investigators are probing the cause of a fire that caused $600,000 in damages to a restaurant and bar in an industrial park on Old Innes Road.

Ottawa Fire Services say it received a call around

2:50 a.m. Tuesday morning reporting a fire at La Vague Bistro Lounge.

Fire crews reported seeing open flames when they arrived at the one-storey building at the corner of Bantree Road and Old Innes. They said the fire was "knocked down fairly quickly" and there were no injuries.

Ottawa initiative crowdsources funding to 'soup up' communities

Participants pay $10 to gather over a bowl of soup, vote on which of six projects deserves the pool of money

GRAHAM LANKTREE
graham.lanktree@metronews.ca

Over a bowl of soup and a small donation of $10 per person, a new Ottawa-based micro-grant initiative looks to kickstart people's plans to brighten their community — be it with a bakery or additions to a public park.

"I heard about it six or seven months ago and it just stayed with me," Soup Ottawa founder Dan Monafu said of how he stumbled on the idea, started in Chicago in 2007, that has since spread

And the contenders are ...

- The projects on tap for Soup Ottawa's first meeting May 30 range from a vegan and gluten-free bakery that wants to be paid in kind, a program to teach kids how to make video games at birthday parties and another to beautify the park in a low-income community.
- Looking at how many tickets have been given away so far, the prize could be anywhere from $500 to $1,000, Monafu said.

to 200 cities worldwide. "I enjoyed the fact that you get to be inspired by local people."

The idea is that those who show up and pay the $10 fee get to vote on which project deserves the pool of money, said Monafu. "Grants like Kiva and Indiegogo do something similar, but here you get to meet the people you are funding and have soup together."

At $10 a head, Soup Ottawa gathers the money of those who attend and has them vote on which community project they like best after listening to a series of five-minute pitches for six projects. Monafu whittled down the spread from 15 ideas.

"Everybody gets a plastic spoon and they put it in the bowl for their favourite project," he said of how the votes will be cast at the end of the evening hosted at HUB Ottawa downtown with food donated by caterers Grounded.

Disabled workers EARN a second shot at work world as program gets funding injection

When Allan Lough fell out of a five-ton truck and onto his leg at work four years ago, his debilitating injury put him out of a job and onto workman's compensation.

Yet he's now back in the saddle thanks to a United Way program that has received a $142,000 boost from the province to help get people with disabilities back to work.

"I wasn't allowed to go back to the job I had before because I worked in a wet area and they were afraid of injuring the leg," said Lough as he celebrated his first year working for car-rental agents Enterprise Holdings after finding a job there through the Employment Accessibility Resource Network (EARN).

"I would still be sitting at home on workman's comp just trying to find something as I recovered," he said when asked what he would be doing if he hadn't discovered the EARN program. "Because of my knee being injured I can't stand a lot, I can't sit a lot, I have to be moving around all the time."

That's why his job as a driver for the car-rental company delivering vehicles is a perfect fit, he says. "I'm in a car, I'm out of a car. The longest I ever sit is five minutes."

The members of EARN helped set Lough up with the rental agency after they learned about his disability and armed him with job-interview skills and a new resumé after giving him some pointers.

Many employers are wary of hiring employees with disabilities, said EARN spokesperson Kelly Mertl, but the goal of the program is to break down those barriers and show that disabled employees often turn out to be the most productive and loyal.

"I think the biggest misconception is that somebody with a disability will create more work," said Mertl, noting that most accommodations these employees need are low-cost for the work they turn out. Merely a foot stool, large-print computer screen or more flexible work schedules are enough to accommodate them, she said.

"What we've found is that people with disabilities are very loyal and have a really long tenure with employers and really give 110 per cent."

The thousands of dollars of new funding from the Trillium Foundation, Mertl said, will go to creating more networking sessions where employers can meet EARN's candidates.

"Once people know that you've been injured, some people are afraid to hire people with a disability," said Lough, pointing out that he got his job after one of these networking sessions. "Within the year I've been there at Enterprise I've missed two days."

Rescue winds down in city torn asunder

Death toll lowered to 24. Early chaos led to initial report of 51 slain

Rescue workers neared the end of the search for survivors and the dead in the Oklahoma City suburb where a rare and powerful tornado claimed 24 lives. Residents of Moore began returning home, some of them finding empty lots cleared down to bare red earth in place of their homes.

Scientists concluded the twister was an EF5 on the enhanced Fujita scale, the most powerful type of twister, capable of lifting reinforced buildings off the ground.

After nearly 24 hours of searching, Moore's fire chief said he was confident there were no more bodies or survivors in the rubble.

"I'm 98 per cent sure," Gary Bird told reporters Tuesday.

Emergency crews had trouble navigating devastated neighbourhoods because there were no street signs left. Some used smartphones or GPS devices to guide them.

The death toll was revised downward from 51 after the state medical examiner said some victims may have been counted twice in the confu-

School shelters

Plaza Towers Elementary, where seven children were killed, and another damaged school did not have reinforced storm shelters or safe rooms, said Albert Ashwood of the Department of Emergency Management.

- More than 100 schools in the state have safe rooms, but he added a shelter would not necessarily have saved more lives.

Canadian storm chaser tracks what lies ahead

A tornado outside Wichita, Kan., on May 19, apparently part of the same system that devastated Moore, Okla. GREG JOHNSON/CONTRIBUTED

A Saskatchewan-based storm chaser said he was close by when a mile-wide tornado touched down in Moore, Okla., on Monday and continues to track the storm blamed for the deaths of at least 24 people.

Greg Johnson said he left the Moore suburb 20 minutes before the tornado hit.

"The reality is this wasn't just an event for Moore. Today is the fourth day of a storm system that has rolled through the southern plains — Moore was the latest one," said Johnson.

"The day before, however, the city of Shawnee, Okla., took a direct hit as well and there were fatalities; an entire community was destroyed."

Johnson is currently chasing the storm system through Texas and said people are hyper-aware of the danger.

Arias pleads for life

Jodi Arias asked jurors to give her life in prison, arguing she “lacked perspective” when she told a reporter after she was convicted of murder that she preferred execution to spending the rest of her days in jail.

Standing confidently but at times her voice breaking, she told the same jury that found her guilty of first-degree murder that she planned to use her time in prison to bring about positive changes, including donating her hair to be made into wigs for cancer victims, helping recycle trash and designing T-shirts that would raise money for victims of domestic abuse.

Arias admitted killing boyfriend Travis Alexander and said it was the “worst thing” she had ever done.

Expense scandal.

Some observers have painted Duffy crisis as the most serious test the Tories have faced since 2011's majority win

Harper said in his first public comments since revelations last week that Wright wrote a personal cheque worth $90,000 to embattled Sen. Mike Duffy.

“I’m very upset about the conduct we have witnessed, the conduct of some parliamentarians and the conduct of my own office.”

Harper didn’t go into detail, however, about just how involved he or his office was in helping Duffy repay living expenses he shouldn’t have claimed in the first place.

Nor did he go any farther behind closed doors; sources told The Canadian Press that while MPs pressed for more details during the meeting on his office’s role in bailing out Duffy, they didn’t get any.

The matter is in the hands of the federal ethics commissioner and the Senate ethics officer, who can be trusted to sort things out, many suggested.

“Trust me, they ask all the questions and they get to the bottom of the matters and that is the appropriate place, and that’s where the ethics commissioner’s report comes up,” said Labour Minister Lisa Raitt.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

A “very upset” Prime Minister Stephen Harper tried to settle down a scandal-rattled Conservative caucus Tuesday with talk of accountability and Senate reform, but shed no new light on the $90,000 transaction that cost him his chief of staff.

Conservative MPs and senators heading into Tuesday’s caucus meeting had hoped Harper would provide more facts behind the growing scandal that forced his right-hand man, Nigel Wright, to resign over the weekend.

But if Harper’s speech — opened up on this occasion to the media, a rarity — was any indication, they didn’t get much.

“I don’t think any of you are going to be very surprised to hear that I am not happy,”

T.O. mayor silent on ‘crack video’

Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau decried Ford’s alleged use of an anti-gay slur against him. “It’s a sentiment that a huge number of Canadians ... find reprehensible and unacceptable.”

Premier Kathleen Wynne expressed concern over the ongoing firestorm. “It’s concerning to me if there are issues ... that get in the way of a government, a municipal government, being able to work in the best interest of the city,” Wynne said when pressed. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Going to the market to eat worms

Insects are shown for sale at a market in Chiang Mai, Thailand, in this file photo. Researchers say Thailand is showing the world how to respond to the global food crisis by raising bugs for eating. The United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization released a study and handbook Tuesday on what they call six-legged livestock — edible bugs and worms that can help meet global food demand that is expected to grow 60 per cent by 2050. The agency says they provide a rich source of protein, vitamins and minerals. The study was conducted in Thailand, where insects such as crickets, grasshoppers and bamboo worms have long been a part of diets, especially in rural areas.

Apple on hot seat over offshore tax strategies

Billions saved? CEO Tim Cook denies report that says company uses Irish subsidiaries to dodge U.S. taxes

Apple's CEO is disputing assertions by a Senate panel that the company avoids billions of dollars in U.S. taxes by shifting profits to foreign affiliates.

Tim Cook testified at a hearing Tuesday by the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, which released a report Monday attacking Apple's tax practices.

"We pay all the taxes we owe — every single dollar," Cook said. "We don't depend on tax gimmicks."

Cook, who is more accustomed to commanding a stage in front of investors and techies than facing a congressional committee, took a defensive tone with his opening statement. He punched out words when stressing the 600,000 jobs that the company supports while adding that Apple is the nation's largest corporate taxpayer. Cook advocated an overhaul of the U.S. tax code.

At the same time, Cook said he was happy to appear in the spotlight of a congressional hearing to be able to give Apple's side of the story.

"I'm saying it's who we are as people.... Wherever we are, we're an American company," Cook insisted when asked about Apple's use of affiliate companies in Ireland.

Quoted

"We pay all the taxes we owe — every single dollar. We don't depend on tax gimmicks."

Apple CEO Tim Cook, testifying before a U.S. Senate panel.

The $6 billion US in taxes that Apple says it paid in fiscal 2012 works out to $16 million a day.

The subcommittee's report estimates that Apple avoided at least $3.5 billion in U.S. federal taxes in 2011 and $9 billion in 2012 by using its tax strategy, and described a complex setup involving Irish subsidiaries as being a key element of this strategy.

But Cook said the Irish subsidiaries don't reduce the company's U.S. taxes at all. Rather, they manage cash earned overseas. If that cash were to be repatriated to the U.S., it would be subject to U.S. taxes.

Like other multinationals, Apple chooses to keep cash overseas so as not to pay the 35 per cent U.S. corporate tax rate. Apple is holding overseas $102 billion of its total $145 billion in cash. Cook reaffirmed Apple's position that given current U.S. tax rates, it has no intention of repatriating its overseas profits to the U.S. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

World's priciest pigeon defies EU crisis

Pigeons fly inside their coop at Pigeon Paradise in Knesselare, Belgium. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Flying high above Europe's economic crisis, a local lightning-fast pigeon called Bolt became the world's most expensive racing bird when his Belgian breeder sold it for about $410,000 to a Chinese businessman.

One-year-old Bolt, named after the Jamaican Olympic superstar sprinter Usain Bolt, and with an outstanding pedigree of proven champions to match, was the latest Belgian-bred pigeon to claim record prices.

Still, the selling price surprised everyone involved in the sport, auction house Pipa said. The previous record for a sale of a single bird stood at about $330,000 from January 2012.

"I was stunned by the prices offered," Pipa CEO

Nikolaas Gyselbrecht said Tuesday. At a time when a crisis is holding Europe in an ever tighter grip, a feathered handful of prime fowl of some 450 grams is reaching unparalleled levels.

"One of the reasons there is no economic impact is that buyers are spread around the globe," Gyselbrecht said.

Firearms safety. Wireless controller lets gun owners disable weapons via phone

A high-tech startup is wading into the gun control debate with a wireless controller that would allow gun owners to know when their weapon is being moved — and disable it remotely.

The technology, but not an actual gun, was demonstrated Tuesday at a wireless technology conference in Las Vegas. It comes at a time when U.S. lawmakers are considering contentious smart gun laws that would require new guns to include high-tech devices that limit who can fire them.

The new Yardarm Technologies LLC system would trigger an alarm on an owner's cell-phone if a gun is moved, and the owner could then hit a button to activate the safety and disable the weapon. New guns would come with a microchip on the body and antennas winding around the grip.

The Yardarm system is one of several recently introduced offerings: The iGun only fires if it recognizes a ring on a finger, the Intelligun uses a fingerprint locking system and TriggerSmart uses radio frequency identification. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ebook sales made up 15 per cent of overall book sales in 2012, based on surveys with 4,000 consumers.

Kobo and Kindle have grown to become familiar brands in Canada but ebook sales now appear to be plateauing, suggests a report by the industry organization BookNet Canada.

Based on surveys with 4,000 book-buying consumers, BookNet Canada pegged paperback sales in 2012 at about 58 per cent of the market, while hardcovers accounted for 24 per cent and ebook sales made up 15 per cent.

BookNet Canada president and CEO Noah Genner says early sales data from this year shows ebook sales are steady and no longer growing.

The report also found that most consumers still preferred to buy their books in stores rather than shopping online.

Sales of Hadfield's guitar go into orbit

Sales of a Vancouver-made guitar have skyrocketed since astronaut Chris Hadfield released a music video on May 12 of himself playing David Bowie's Space Oddity on the International Space Station. Guitar-maker Larrivee has since sold $100,000 worth of the three-quarter-size parlour guitar, prompting it to release a commemorative edition of its P-01 model.

RULE IS PAR FOR THE COURSE

Golf is one of those sports, like curling, that straddles the legitimate-activity fence.

To excel at golf, much skill is required. To suck at golf, no skill is required. Believe me, I know.

At its highest level, golf is an exhibition of power, grace, skill and athleticism. At its lowest level — mine — it requires good timing so you can stop for snacks between the 9th and 10th hole without holding up the foursome behind you.

Golf is also susceptible to technology. Clubs now come with an adjustable loft, so you can dial up a shot as easily as hot soup from the microwave.

And golf balls are made of flubber — if you actually hit one, it goes a long way. I've seen it done.

Push carts look like alien spacecraft with cup holders. Golf has come far from the early days in Scotland when

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan

metronews.ca

hairy, robust men used to stalk the bog with their mashie niblicks.

And if the belly putter is any indication, it's come too far.

The belly putter is a long-shafted club that you anchor (I'm not making this up) against your chest or belly, allowing for greater stability and therefore a better chance of getting the stupid little round ball in that stupid little round hole.

It looks pretty funny out here in Dufferville, but then what doesn't?

I once watched a guy take 12 shots to get his ball out of a sand trap. Then he calmly put his club back in the bag, picked up his ball, got into his cart and drove off the course, leaving his partner and the other members of his foursome slack-jawed with incredulity.

But the real problem is pro-level golf, where guys like Ernie Els, Adam Scott and Keegan Bradley have all gained a distinct advantage, and don't look good doing it.

It used to be that the biggest threat to golf's reputation was plaid pants, but as the belly or anchor putter bears an embarrassing resemblance to a crutch, it was obvious that it had to go.

As Tiger Woods so eloquently put it: "It should be mandatory to have to swing all 14 clubs."

That's easy for him to say. He actually has a swing. Most of us swing AT the ball, which is different.

So on Tuesday, golf banned the belly putter, effective Jan. 1, 2016.

Now it's up to the various pro tours and Dufferville to decide if they're going to swing free or die.

This is a hopeful sign that golf is pulling back from the brink of the absurd.

Who knows, maybe the golf lords will get staunch and ban the adjustable driver, which is kind of like having four or five extra clubs in your bag.

And once they get a firm grip on the clubs, how long before they take a swing at plaid pants?

These adorable opossums haven't quite mastered their balance on this thin branch.

Thankfully, the baby marsupials managed to heave themselves to safety after a few minutes of clinging on.

The critters were spotted by nature photographer Ronald Wittek gathering around their mother's back on a game farm in Minnesota. For the photographer, the best part of the image is its composition.

"It was incredible to snap the marsupials in action," he said, adding that as adults they are too heavy and just use their tails to keep their balance. METRO

RE: Should You Introduce Your Kids To Religion? Published May 5 online

I have struggled with religion myself. We are a same-sex family, one being born into the Muslim religion and the other into the Catholic. Neither of these religions has given us acceptance or support. We see religion as a club for the elite, and we unfortunately are not the elite. Why would we expose our child to something that is so judgmental and doesn't accept us? She will make her own decision when she is ready, as we cannot teach her something we don't believe ourselves.

Car chase movies.

Fast and Furious 6 grabs the wheel this weekend but it's far from the only movie in its genre to hold the pole position

scene@metronews.ca

This weekend Fast and Furious 6, the latest high-octane installment of the car crazy franchise, hit screens.

Along with it will come squealing tires, revving engines and some of cinema's wildest car chases.

The auto chase is a movie staple, a tradition that dates back over 100 years of movie history.

The silent Keystone Cop films featured the first recorded car chases — a mix of slapstick, jalopies and rough-and-ready stunts — as far back as 1912.

Early Hollywood often played the chases for laughs. In The Bank Dick, W.C. Fields is taken hostage by a bank robber and forced to drive the getaway car.

In the chaotic chase that follows, the vehicle narrowly misses clipping the heads off bystanders as it flies over a ditch and slowly starts to disintegrate.

"The resale value of this car is going to be nil after you get over this trip," says Fields.

Emanuel Levy, an American film critic, said, "Bullitt contains one of the most exciting car chases in film history, a sequence that revolutionized Hollywood's standards."

Lasting just nine minutes and 42 seconds, the filming of the scene took three weeks pairing Steve McQueen's 1968 Ford Mustang 390 GT 2+2 Fastback against the villain's 1968 Dodge Charger 440 Magnum.

The chase was planned to run at 75 to 80 mph but ended up racing through the streets of San Francisco at speeds of more than 110 mph.

Several years later, The French Connection made Gene Hackman a star, won five Academy Awards and featured one of the greatest ever chase scenes.

The realistic looking chase was shot without permits on the streets of Bensonhurst, Brooklyn.

The sequence got a little too realistic for one car owner.

A hapless driver, at the corner of Stillwell Ave. and 86th St., who was unaware a film was being shot, was side swiped by Hackman's car.

Director William Friedkin liked the shot and paid off the driver on the spot.

Chase sequences have gotten more expensive since the early '70s.

Gone are the days where director John Hough could stage a wild chase between a lime green '69 Dodge Charger and a helicopter in Dirty Mary Crazy Larry for peanuts.

John Moore, director of A Good Day To Die Hard starring Bruce Willis, says the chase scene in that movie cost $11 million.

They destroyed 132 cars, damaged another 518 and even flattened a Lamborghini. That one hurt, he said. "I'm a car fanatic."

Gregory Smith. Taking a Rookie run at directing the boys in Blue

Rookie Blue actor Gregory Smith is taking the director's reigns. HANDOUT

It's no surprise, really, that Gregory Smith is directing episodes of the series he co-stars in, Rookie Blue. The Toronto-lensed cop drama returns for a fourth season May 23 on Global and ABC.

"He's a particular renaissance man," says Rookie Blue executive producer and showrunner Tassie Cameron. "He's one of those guys you discover suddenly that he's running some tech company out of his trailer, he's taking award-winning photographs from his travels to Africa ... he's just one of those people."

The Toronto-born, B.C.-raised actor, who turns 30 this summer, has been around TV and film sets almost his entire life. His father Maurice produced low-budget films and his teacher mother Terrea acted in some of them.

Before he was a teen, Smith was showing up on Vancouver-based TV shows such as The Commish, The Hat Squad and Highlander.

Over the years, he's also appeared in 25 films.

So when he was given an opportunity to become the first Rookie Blue cast member to direct last season, Smith

"That's basically how I learned everything as an actor," he says during an interview in his trailer on the set. "I was just a kid and I worked with these actors and I'd ask them questions and then something would work for me and I'd try to move forward with it."

Jason Newsted looks for his own brand of Justice

Metal health. Ex-Metallica bassist Jason Newsted is ready to stand on his own two feet, even if they feel a little shaky underneath him

LINDA LABAN
Metro World News

Though Jason Newsted has popped up in a few notable projects since quitting Metallica in 2001, his new band is all about him.

"It's a big deal," he says. "There's a few different hats I'm taking on: I'm the frontman, it's my songs, it's my voice."

It's also his name. In the tradition of Van Halen, Santana or even Bon Jovi, the name of the band is the same as the name of the man.

This is a bigger commitment than participating in Dave Navarro's made-for-reality-TV band, Rock Star Supernova and the bassist seems acutely aware of that.

"It's nervous excitement," he says. "It's a giant challenge."

Newsted formed six months ago when the band's namesake started writing songs with guitarist Jessie Farnsworth and drummer Jesus Mendez Jr., and they recorded a thrashy four-song EP as tight and terse as its title: Metal.

In February, Stained guitarist Mike Mushok joined and, though we couldn't get the band's leader to reveal its

Through summer, Newsted has 70 gigs worldwide, including gigs in England, at the 100 Club and the Download Festival, the same two

Moving on

Quitting Metallica wasn't easy for Newsted. But Metallica — driven and ambitious, but stung by the loss of original bassist Cliff Burton, whom Newsted replaced — was never an easy band to be in.

- Quote. "I am the man who had to step up and make that decision for everyone," Newsted emphasizes of his decision to leave in 2001. "It was me that suffered the most. It was me that made the giant sacrifice. It was a horrible, hard decision. I still, every couple of days, think about it even now. I was the first one into the show and the last one out. I wore a Metallica T-shirt onstage every night. I flew my colours, I was full-on dedicated."

'Don't have a girlfriend,' dad advises Jaden Smith

Will Smith has clearly given son — and After Earth co-star — Jaden Smith a lot of advice, but one bit of wisdom sticks out: "Probably the best advice he's ever given me is, 'Don't have a girlfriend,'" Jaden tells E! News. "The stress is real." For his dad's part, it's less about stress and more about not closing yourself off to experiences. "Blending with another person is very difficult, and a lot of times you can lose yourself in the process," the elder Smith says. "So my encouragement to him is to be honest with anybody he interacts with. Don't make commitments that a 14-year-old can't live up to."

The Word

Does Brad Pitt suffer from face blindness?

Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Plenty of Hollywood stars probably have trouble remembering everyone they meet (they meet a lot of people).

Brad Pitt, however, thinks his poor memory might be an actual medical condition. He finds it nearly impossible to remember the faces of anyone he meets, he told Esquire.

For awhile, he tried being honest about his problem. "I took one year where I just said, 'This year, I'm just going to cop to it and say to people, 'OK, where did we meet?' But it just got worse. People were more offended. Every now and then, someone will give me context, and I'll say,

'Thank you for helping me.' But I piss more people off," the star says.

Brad says he's planning to get tested to find out if his forgetfulness is actually a mental condition called prosopagnosia, or face blindness. He has said that the condition means he doesn't go out anymore because of anxiety about the condition (and probably because he has six children).

So basically, Brad Pitt has a face everyone remembers whereas he can't remember anyone else's. Oh, the irony!

Heat up your summer with some cool Nashville vibes

Not all country. While you might think it's a honky-tonk town, Nashville is a hub for all kinds of music, culture and tasty food

life@metronews.ca

You don't have to know how to two-step to fall for Nashville. The city recently rebranded itself from America's country music capital to Music City — and there's good reason.

It's a vibrant hub of up-and-coming singers, songwriters and musicians across genres, including pop, rock, gospel, bluegrass, jazz, classical, alt-country, blues and soul. And it offers an array of cultural, historical and foodie attractions that complement its musical backdrop.

Nashville has more than 120 live music venues; there's even a live music app (find it at musiccity.com) that uses your current location to tell you where to find the nearest live music venue.

No trip to Nashville is complete without a stop at the legendary Bluebird Cafe. This listening venue has been around for 30 years, where up-and-coming musicians and the "songwriters behind the hits" showcase their talents in an acoustic song circle for fans and music execs alike. It's an intimate venue (only 100 seats), so get there early or make reservations online at bluebirdcafe.com.

Even if you're not into country music, it's worth checking out the clubs on Honky Tonk Alley — a breeding ground for young, hopeful performers. You'll hear everything from rock to alt-country and might even get a sneak peak of the next big thing.

One of the most famous, long-running honky tonks is Tootsie's Orchid Lounge, where Willie Nelson and Patsy Cline used to hang out. Robert's Western Wear is a boot store by day and honky tonk by night, where you'll hear some of the world's best rockabilly. Or check out a show at the Grand Ole Opry, which began as a radio broadcast in 1925 and today serves as a live-entertainment venue honouring country music's legends and contemporary chart-toppers.

If you're a fan of Jack White, check out the Nashville location of his record label, Third Man Records, with a record store, live venue and analogue recording booth. Here you'll find an amazing collection of vinyl, most of which is produced by Jack White himself.

The newly opened Johnny Cash Museum is a tribute to the Man in Black — he's the only artist to have songs on the Billboard for six consecutive decades. With a treasure trove of memorabilia brought together under one roof, you'll find

Family trips

What to see this summer

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

Just in time for your family vacation there are a number of attractions making their debut this summer.

Located at the foot of the Olympic stadium tower, Montreal's $48 million Rio Tinto Alcan Planetarium houses two theatres: the Milky Way theatre, where visitors study and learn about the sky, and the more interactive Chaos Theatre. Visitors to the Chaos Theatre enjoy a 20-minute multimedia odyssey through the universe.

The complex includes numerous exhibits and the largest public collection of meteorites in Quebec.

Set to open later this summer, the Ripley's Aquarium of Canada is located at the base of Toronto's CN Tower and Rogers Centre.

The Aquarium will be one of the largest in North America, hosting 13,500 inhabitants, or approximately 450 species. The facility will feature a tropical reef tank and a 315-foot-long moving walkway, in a see-through tunnel, below a shark lagoon inhabited by sand tiger sharks.

If you are looking to enjoy nature this summer, you no longer need a car to get to the front gates of Ontario's best-loved outdoor retreats. The Park Bus has added a number of new routes this summer, including Fathom Five National Marine Park, taking customers directly from downtown Toronto to backcountry access points where you can hook up with outfitters and start your outdoor adventure.

FlyOver Canada at Vancouver's iconic Canada Place is getting lots of great buzz. Housed in the former IMAX theatre, it incorporates the latest in virtual flight-ride technology and is the first of its kind in the country. Up to 60 guests are strapped in their seats and elevated in front of a 20-metre-wide, sphere-shaped screen before embarking on a virtual 4D experience across the country. The adventure showcases a mix of seasons, magnificent landscapes and vibrant colours, all enhanced by wind, scents, mist and sound.

Named after world-renowned Canadian artist Robert Bateman, and located in the historic CPR Steamship Building in Victoria's Inner Harbour, the Robert Bateman Centre features educational space, a retail store and a gallery housing approximately 130 of his masterpieces, from his classic B.C. pieces to his famed Africa collection. Check out the collection of 36 of Bateman's bird pieces where, when visitors run their hands over the painting labels, the appropriate bird sounds resonate in the gallery.

Keep the crotchety customer at bay. Wringing necks is not an option

If you've been upholding the reputation of your employer, you shouldn't be treated poorly. Chances are, your manager will know better as to how to diffuse the situation, so ask them if they could give you a hand. iSTOCK

I've always done a pretty good job of living up to my name, Rosie. Whether I'm embarrassed, nervous or just warm, I'll blush.

That's why one of my previous jobs in retail could often lead to a very rosy-faced Rosie — I seemed to get stuck with every difficult customer.

One particular incident has always stuck in my mind. I was a wide-eyed and innocent student working a sales position in a photography store and I had yet to experience such a difficult customer.

On this occasion, the customer mumbled his request to me and upon my asking if he would please repeat his question as I didn't quite catch it the first time, he yelled it into my ear. My manager had gone to the back and I was alone at the store front.

I took a deep breath and tried to help the customer with his request, which is when he started to taunt me and call me names. I cashed him out as quickly and efficiently as I could and tried to ignore the insults.

When he finally left the store, my manager emerged from the back and asked me why I was bright red with tears in my eyes and then offered me some words of wisdom for dealing with particularly difficult or rude customers:

Woe is work

"My manager emerged from the back and asked me why I was bright red with tears in my eyes."

Rosie Hales

Stay calm

This gives the customer fewer reasons to be rude and also helps you keep control of your emotions.

Don't retaliate or argue

You don't want to make the customer any more aggravated.

Try to empathize

Remember the quote: "Be kind; everyone is fighting their own battle." While it might seem that this person is trying to fight you instead, you don't know the kind of day they've had. However, if this person is just being downright rude then follow step 4.

Don't let it get you down

While it seems totally wrong that the customer might be taking their bad day out on you, chances are that if you've done nothing to provoke the customer then their behaviour is probably nothing personal.

ROSIE HALES, TALENTEGG.CA

There's something you really want, so raise your voice!

Ask and you shall receive. How can you expect to climb the career ladder if you never express your desire to do so?

RACHEL MCKEE

A few months ago, a good friend of mine approached me about an internal job posting within his organization for which he was interested in applying.

He had been a video editor within this sports broadcasting company for four years and definitely needed more responsibility, a new challenge and something to give him renewed excitement about the organization and his field. He was hesitant to apply, as he'd been told that the individuals hiring already had someone in mind for the position and he felt that a fair amount of the job description was out of his skill set, as the job

Managers want ambitious people like you on their team and they always want to give you more responsibility. So speak up! iSTOCK required producing experience. I encouraged him to apply regardless, as it would show upper management that he was looking to make lateral and/or vertical moves within the organization, that he wanted to be given more leadership opportunities and that he was looking to grow within this field. Ultimately, there was no harm in applying. His superiors wouldn't even know he was interested in the position if he didn't apply and likely hadn't considered him as a possibility for the job — not because he wasn't qualified or capable, but because he hadn't voiced any interest until this point. If you don't ask, you don't get.

My friend applied for the position and within two days he heard back from the hiring manager for the position. He had an interview three days later and, what do you know? He got the job! Two weeks later he set off on a month of travelling across Canada filming the fourth season of this station's signature show. He had new responsibilities, new networking opportunities, and the chance to learn new skills within his field — and he could not have been more pumped to get started! None of this would have happened if he had settled for the status quo and hadn't voiced his interest in this exciting new opportunity. He Spoke Up!

Think of it this way: it's more efficient and cost effective to teach a new skill to an eager, existing employee than to hire someone new to fill the gap. You'll be surprised to see the opportunities that become available to you by showing this initiative, enthusiasm and dedication in your organization.

Loud and proud

Ways to speak up successfully

- Arrange a meeting with your manager/supervisor to discuss your long-term career vision
- Talk to your boss about ways for you to get more involved in your organization
- Apply for internal job postings
- Request to be put on certain project teams
- Tell your boss you are looking for more responsibility or that you want to acquire new skills — be specific!

Opportunities to open up your yapper

Whether you're volunteering, have a part-time job, contract position, or are fully employed, it's important to speak up when you want to:

- Gain more experience
- Learn new skills
- Make a lateral move in your organization
- Get promoted
- Be given new opportunities
- Tackle a specific project
- Join a project team
- Be given more responsibility
- Take on a leadership role

Survive the post-grad phase with the Triple P

Where do I go from here? Proactivity, persistence and patience will pay off when post-graduation leaves you feeling a little gloomy

VALIENTE
TalentEgg.ca

I naively thought it wasn't going to happen to me.

My friends who had already graduated warned me: prepare for the depressing months after your graduation.

And I thought listening to a lot of inspiring TED featured talks from ivy league commencement addresses would suffice (it helps a bit).

For many architecture students, the late bloomers (I was in the same boat), they might begin to do their portfolios.

Some might get their job offers early if they prepared their portfolio on time during school and just in time to pay their student loans. Some might struggle and have a different scenario.

It's really a waiting game and it can get frustrating and disheartening at times. I tried to be positive through this experience.

Failing and falling behind has prepared me to be positive through it. A lot of students deal with this — what I'd like to call the post-grad phase.

Since many of my friends in architecture school have moved back home or moved on, myself included, this is a time I wanted to extend my network and wanted to meet people outside of architecture and learn from them. In the months following graduation, I went to entrepreneurship, leadership and architecture events to meet people and network.

I wanted to find out what success is and open my eyes to a world that is not just architecture — and I have been inspired and motivated.

It's important to remind yourself to stay hopeful, strong and to not be a victim to circumstances.

What kept me going on during this post-grad phase is the Triple P: proactivity, persistence and patience.

Stay Proactive

- And not reactive — you have to keep busy.
- Network, network, network!
 - Attend workshops, lectures, talk to people.
- Keep building your portfolio!
- Learn and acquire new skills!
- Do competitions and join design charettes!

Stay Persistent

- There will be moments of self-doubt — you have to prevail and be positive.
- Getting hired will come unexpectedly.
- Rejection should not be taken personally — at the interview, it comes down to how well you click and fit

Stay Patient

- If this career is truly what you want to do and are hungry for, you'll stick with it through thick and thin.
- Our professors in architecture school were right when they said that this career path might not be the most profitable path to tread in relation to other fields — business and commerce is where it's at if you're after profit.
- Realize that this is a career of passion. Passion is what keeps me going in spite of the trying moments during this transitional phase — it's not easy, but the things you're passionate about are worth fighting for.

in the workplace, and firms might not have enough projects.

Failure taught me patience, persistence and the need to be proactive. It's about carefully reflecting on yourself and constantly looking at opportunities to improve and move on.

If there is anything that my setbacks in university honed in me, it's resilience to keep going through these moments.

To climb up requires failing and learning from it — ultimately this is a career for those who are passionate about architecture and design.

To close this entry, I thought I'd finish up with one more tip — stay hopeful. This isn't an easy phase for anyone, but be positive and look toward finding what it is you are passionate about and make it your motivating push.

Keeping the creative career in constant motion

Start your art. You're sure the right side of your brain will bring you business, but what's the right way to begin?

DOUG SMITH

Metro World News in New York

There is both professional and personal risk involved with choosing a creative career.

"Anyone pursuing a creative career should realize it's a job. A fun job. However, discipline is essential and like an athlete, dancer or musician, practice and challenge yourself constantly to get better," says B. Jeffrey Madoff, a Parsons School of Design faculty member and teacher of his self-designed course, Creativity: Making a Living With Your Ideas.

How do you approach building a creative career with your students?

As a teacher, my job is to provoke, entertain, disrupt and educate. I crack jokes, make outrageous things up, call on students randomly to include everyone in the discussion and most importantly, create an environment where the students will feel safe so they will not be afraid to speak up.

What would you say to someone who believes they have failed at making a creative career work?

It's important to define what failure is for you. If a person has failed in their pursuit, it's important to understand why. Failure can be a terrific learning experience. Failure, to me, is not trying. As long as I keep trying and keep learning, I haven't failed.

Remembering your passion for this profession will keep you shooting for the stars. ISTOCK

What are some motivational tips for people wanting to get a creative career underway?

Motivation is why you do something: for money, fame, approval and satisfaction. It's up to the person to keep themselves motivated by what they hope to get out of what they do. One can be supported and encouraged by others, but the motivation has to come from within. Creativity to me is a passion to affect change. Passion is internal. Follow your passion.

Smuggle vegetables onto the warm weather menu with Summer Rolls

1. To make the dipping sauce, in a food processor or blender combine the peanut butter, hoisin, 2 tablespoons lime juice, scallions, soy sauce, sesame oil, hot sauce and water. Puree until smooth. Taste and add more lime juice or hot sauce if desired, and additional water if necessary to thin the sauce to a good dipping consistency. Transfer to a bowl and set aside.

2. To prepare rolls, in a small bowl combine the rice vinegar, sugar and a hefty pinch of salt. Whisk until the salt and sugar are dissolved. Add the carrots and cabbage and toss well. Set aside.

3. Fill a large bowl with hot water. Add 1 rice paper wrapper to the water and let soak for 10 to 15 seconds, or until just barely soft and pliable. Lay the wrapper flat on the counter. In the centre of the wrapper, place a small, oblong mound of the carrot-cabbage mixture, then top with a bit each of jicama, bell pepper and snow peas. Top with 2 mint leaves.

4. To fold the roll, start by folding the right and left sides of the wrapper over the fillings. Next, fold the end closest to you up over the fillings and sides. Holding the roll firmly, roll it away from you until the remaining wrapper is completely rolled up. Transfer the roll, seam side down, to a plate and cover with a damp paper towel. Repeat with the remaining wrappers and fillings.

5. The vegetable rolls can be made up to 4 hours ahead, covered with a damp paper towel and plastic wrap and chilled. Serve with the dipping sauce.

Sens' fighting spirit elevates confidence

NHL playoffs. Resilient performance in Game 3 has Ottawa feeling good about its chances of tying series at 2

The Ottawa Senators have every intention of making this a series.

The Senators trail the Pittsburgh Penguins 2-1 in their Eastern Conference semifinal heading into Game 4 Wednesday at Scotiabank Place. After a big win in Game 3 — another resilient performance in a season full of them — the Senators are confident they can tie the series.

"The next game is the biggest game of the year, that's the way it is," said Senators captain Daniel Alfredsson. "No matter what happens you treat it (as the biggest game) and when that's done you do the same for the next one."

The Senators' confidence in themselves and their ability to rebound has been the benchmark of their entire season. Ottawa's 2-1 double-overtime win Sunday night was just another example.

Alfredsson tied the game at 1-1 with 29 seconds remaining in regulation and Colin Greening went on to score the winner at the seven-minute mark of the second overtime period.

The Senators are well aware that the Penguins will want to take their game to a new level and take control of this series. But they believe that if they play as well

Marc Methot lays a check on the Penguins' Kris Letang during Game 3 on Sunday at Scotiabank Place. Just as they had all season, the Sens showed their resilience by winning in comeback fashion. FRED CHARTRAND/THE CANADIAN PRESS or better than they did Sunday, they will have a good chance of winning.

"We can't stray too far from our game plan," said Ottawa defenceman Marc Methot. "Last game in particular we were so strong defensively and that's a huge key. We know we're going to get our opportunities offensively in their own zone."

Coincidentally, the Penguins believe the exact same thing.

"I think every game the more the series goes on the more important each one gets," said Penguins captain Sidney Crosby. "You can see the desperation they have. They want to make sure it's 2-2 going back to Pittsburgh and obviously we know the scenario is to come here and get one of two on the road and go back home with a chance to finish off the series would be great.

"I don't think we have to change anything to do that. Our desperation's been there, our compete level has been there and we believe that if we play the same way as last game and limit a few mistakes that we have a good chance of getting the win."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mind games

Veteran defenceman Chris Phillips believes much of the Senators' success has come from their ability to stay emotionally grounded.

- "You'd be absolutely beat if after every game that's all you did was think about the last game or worry about the result of the next game or riding highs or being down if you lose the previous one," Phillips said. "It's all about the process and playing and on the days off not even thinking about hockey and removing yourself from it."

THE HOCKEY NEWS
Murray Pam
ottawa@metronews.ca

Dubbed the #PeskySens in social media circles, the Ottawa Senators have used this Twitter hashtag as a rallying cry all season. And never has it been more apt than in their past two home contests.

In Game 4 versus the Canadiens, it was Cory Conacher's tying-goal with 22 seconds remaining that set the stage for Kyle Turris' overtime winner. Conacher's marker, combined with goalie Carey Price's knee injury, were fatal blows to Montreal's psyche. From then on, the Habs could not recover.

On Sunday it was Daniel Alfredsson and Colin Greening providing "pesky" heroics. Once again the Senators rescued a game in the waning moments. With 29 ticks left, Erik Karlsson in the penalty box and Craig Anderson pulled for an extra attacker, Alfredsson was Captain Clutch redirecting a Milan Michalek pass over the shoulder of Penguins goalie Tomas Vokoun to even the score at 1-1. That wasn't the end of the dramatics. Greening, bleeding from an errant high stick, jammed home a rebound in double overtime giving the Sens life in a series that appeared lost.

The cliché, "a team isn't out of a series until they lose a game at home," holds true for the Sens who are undefeated in three playoff matches at Scotiabank Place. Maple Leafs coach Randy Carlyle blamed his club's demise on losing game's 3 and 4 at Air Canada Centre rather than their seventh-game meltdown in Boston. Conversely, Ottawa's post-season success has come from feeding off their rabid hometown fans. Case in point, Anderson's comments after Alfredsson's game-tying goal: "We got momentum from our crowd. We tried to build on that."

They'll have to keep riding that wave in Game 4. To do so, the Sens will have to stay out of the penalty box. They were forced to kill off six penalties to the Penguins' three in Game 3. Although the Senators had 48 shots on goal in four-plus periods, there were an additional 50 directed at the Penguins' net that were either blocked or went wide. The Senators also have to protect the puck more as they were credited with 20 giveaways, 13 more than their counterpart.

The next game is always the most important in the Stanley Cup playoffs. A loss puts the Senators on the verge of elimination. A win and the #PeskySens even the series.

Bryan Colangelo is out as general manager of the Toronto Raptors, but he will remain the NBA team's president.

The Raptors say they have extended Colangelo's contract as president and that he will report directly to Tim Leiweke, the new CEO of Maple Leaf Sports and Entertainment.

But somebody else will take over the team's day-to-day basketball operations and will report directly to Leiweke.

"Do I understand that's going to tax Bryan a little bit? One-hundred per cent," Leiweke said on a conference call Tuesday. "But I think given the circumstances we found ourselves in, the timing of the decision ... and given his choices, I believe it is in everyone's best interest to make this work."

Montreal Expos. Street by former MLB stadium named after Hall of Famer

A stretch of road in front of the stadium where he began his Hall of Fame career has been renamed in honour of former Montreal Expos catcher Gary Carter.

Signs indicating Rue Gary-Carter were already in place on Tuesday as municipal officials announced the renaming of Faillon Street West after the most popular player in the history of the defunct National League baseball club.

"It was here at Jarry Park that the player affectionately known as Kid began his major-league career," said Laurent Blanchard, chairman of the city's executive committee, told a small gathering of officials and fans, some wearing caps and shorts with the Expos' red, white and blue logo.

"He was an idol who touched the heart of Montrealers and inspired many young athletes."

A larger celebration is planned for June 15, when Ahuntsic baseball park in the city's north end will be named for Carter, who died on Feb. 16, 2012 of brain cancer at 57.

Space out in the 2014 Fiat 500L

ALL PHOTOS WHEELBASEMEDIA.COM

2014 Fiat 500L

- Type. Four-door front-wheel drive compact wagon
- Engines (hp). 1.4-litre SOHC I4, turbocharged (160hp)
- Transmissions. Six speed manual, six speed twin clutch automated manual
- Base price (incl. destination) $26,000

Design

Physically, the 500L shares nothing with the 500 two-door, but it does exude a saucy character that's unmistakably Fiat. What really sticks out as unique are the 500L's double windshield pillars that are separated by a glass panel. Interesting, but there will likely be some criticism over forward visibility.

The dash and front interior.

Fuel Economy

As of press time, fuel-economy numbers haven't been released, but a good guesstimate would be 7.8 l/100 km in the city and 5.2 on the highway for versions with the six-speed stick.

Engine

Fiat wisely chose not to install the 500's 101-horsepower 1.4-litre four-cylinder in North American versions of the 500L. Instead, the standard powerplant is the turbocharged 1.4 used in the sporty 500 Abarth. The engine pumps out 160 horsepower and 184 pound-feet of torque.

Review. Fiat 500 gets a makeover to become roomier automobile

wheelbasemedia.com

Fiat means business and that means making the 500 more appealing to North American small-car buyers by giving them more of what they really, really want. That's where the all-new 500L enters the picture.

Sure, the original "Cinquecento" two-door hatchback and its semi-convertible Cabrio and Abarth offshoots are kind of adorable. But let's face it; any car that's 15 centimetres shorter than a Mini Cooper is bound to be a tight fit, especially for anyone occupying the back seat. That's why the brand-extending Mini Clubman and Countryman were created and it's for the same reason that the four-door 500L will debut early this summer.

Making over the 500 to become the 500L meant employing a larger version of the 500's platform, called "small-wide." The tale of the tape reveals a gain of about 70 centimetres in overall length, about 15 centimetres in width and height and slightly more than 30 centimetres between the front and rear wheels, resulting in 42 per cent greater interior volume. You can almost hear six-footer-plus-types across the land cheering at this news.

The 500L is also somewhat larger than its nearest rival, the four-door Mini Cooper Countryman, which translates into considerably more passenger and luggage room.

Fiat has also fashioned the rear seat to accommodate three people, for a total of five (the Countryman is limited to four), although it will help if the meat-in-the-sandwich occupant is less than adult sized. Both the front and the 60:40 split rear seat can be folded when extra cargo space is called for.

The rest of the 500L's interior is more modernistic than that of the 500 and features twin gauge pods in place of a single multi-purpose unit.

The spacey 500L has a flattering side profile.

As well, the L's shifter is floor-mounted instead of being angled directly below the dashboard. It's also a bit early to discuss standard and optional features, but what is known is that the 500L will be offered in Pop, Easy, Trekking and Lounge models. Unfortunately, all-wheel drive is not on the Trekking's build sheet, which pretty much limits where you can actually trek to.

Other up-level equipment includes a panoramic glass sunroof, enlarged touch-screen controls for the audio, communications and navigation systems and a premium Beats by Dr. Dre audio system.

Pricing is expected to come in at about $26,000 for base models but could reach into the $30,000 range when the automatic transmission and other popular options are factored in. Those are reasonable fees for an Italian-bred wagon that won't cramp your style, or you for that matter, while providing an abundance of style that matches its carrying capacity.

DRIVE

Change is coming, as is resistance to change ...

Autopilot. And here's a quartette of automotive stories to back that theory up

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Here are four automotive stories from the past week that all seem to speak to how fast and how slow our world is changing at the same time.

We need to change but for some things we won't — there is this constant struggle: must change versus must not change. Probably a good thing.

Another drive-in goes down

A 58-year-old drive-in theatre in Sharon, Ont., will not make it to its 59th year. Here is an excerpt from the North York Drive In's goodbye message posted on Facebook: "It is with much regret we say goodbye to summer evenings at North York. Technology and conversion to digital projection has made us obsolete and threatens many other independent theatres."

Studios are phasing out the celluloid (or film) format. Theatres with film projector technology are going to have to go digital or go dark. While the family-owned North York Drive In decided against the considerable investment to digital, other drive-ins have made the move and are still alive and well.

Limos disguised as ambulances

The traffic in all the world's major cities keeps getting worse. Apparently the traffic is so bad in Moscow that VIPs are renting special limos to get around — those disguised as medical emergency vehicles. With sirens blazing they are able to get around the gridlock no problem. The ruse was uncovered when one ambulance was pulled over by police for traffic indiscretions and found to be transporting very healthy people in very comfy seating arrangements.

Driving Boom goes silent

A study just released by the U.S. Public Interest Research Group revealed that the post-war Driving Boom is kaput. We always thought "miles travelled per capita" would keep rising forever. But after peaking in 2004 it levelled off and now appears to be levelled off for good. Americans drive no more miles in total today than they did in 2004 and no more per person than they did in 1996.

Of course this is due to two demographics duking it out: baby boomers and their voluminous driving habits moving out of the picture, and the millennials and their stingy driving habits moving more into the picture. Other contributing factors are urbanization, gas prices and less need for commuting in this digital age. The study's authors suggest U.S. legislators might want to rethink plans based on the premise that Americans will keep driving until they drop.

Cool keeps coming

Aston Martin celebrated its 100th anniversary by creating the CC100 Speedster Concept. The "speedster" genre (no top or windshield whatsoever, a race-ready convertible so to speak) was selected to channel the vibe of Aston Martin's most famous racer — the 1959 DBR1. But the old-school vibe is mated to a state-of-the-art carbon fibre body and interior. Like the Aston Martin supercar, the One 77, the CC100's carbon fibre pieces are crafted (by Canadians!) in the big oven at Multimatic, an auto engineering and parts builder based in Markham, Ontario. That's about 30km from the obsolete drive in theatre in Sharon.

Mustang time

Can it really be nearly 50 years since the first Mustang made its official debut at the 1964 New York world's fair? To honour that occasion the recently formed Shinola watch company of Detroit, Mich., is celebrating the Detroit-based legend with a 50th anniversary timepiece. As with all of Shinola's products, the M50Y watch (item number 6990) is built using premium components, including a sapphire crystal and stainless steel case, rotating outer ring and a leather strap. It's also water-resistant to a pressure of 10 atmospheres. The iconic Mustang logo is discretely positioned beneath the 12 o'clock position. Production for this $700 US wristwatch is limited to 1,000 copies. Order yours by visiting cmgestore.com.

Don't be flat

A flat tire is generally a rare occurrence, but it can be a real pain when it invariably does happen. The folks at Fix-A-Flat specialize in — you guessed it — emergency tire-repair solutions. For example, their Ultimate 1-Step tire repair kit includes an inflator with a built-in tire pressure gauge that plugs into your vehicle's 12-volt power receptacle. A container of Fix-A-Flat's environmentally friendly SafeSeal tire sealant is also part of the package. The manufacturer states that the standard car tire can be repaired and reinflated in about seven minutes, and that's without removing the wheel from the car. The Fix-A-Flat Ultimate tire repair kit is $40 US at many department and auto parts stores or visit fixafat.com.

Emergency wipers

Of all the emergency gear you can — or should — be carrying in your vehicle, this one product could really help you out of a dangerous jam during a rain or snowstorm. The E-Blade, manufactured by Jamak Fabrication, Inc., is a 60-centimetre-long wiper that can be trimmed to any size necessary and has been designed to fit almost any snap-to-fit wiper arm. A cutting tool is also included as part of the kit (a handy ruler is imprinted on the package), along with a universal attachment. And the manufacturer claims that the natural rubber blade itself has been designed to produce "superior wiping performance, wear resistance and reduced streaking." The wipes are around $10 and can be bought from jamak.com or thewiperstore.com.

Sounds like fun to us

The portable Tailgater Bluetooth from ION Audio allows you to dock your personal audio device (iPad, iPhone or Android) anywhere you want, or wirelessly stream music from these devices to the unit from a distance of up to 15 to 18 metres. When fully charged, the built-in battery in the Tailgater's 20-watt amplifier can provide up to 50 hours of cordless musical pleasure (the built-in battery monitor keeps track of your power usage). The unit also comes with its own microphone, built-in AM/FM radio, USB charging port, power cord for indoor use as well as a microphone just in case an impromptu karaoke party breaks out. Pick one up for $170 US at ionaudio.com.

Save some more dimes with smooth, smart designs

Driving Force. The shape of your car will affect your long-term fuel bill, so look for the one that allows you both safety and savings

drive@metronews.ca

Designing a sleek vehicle isn't just about good looks. A smooth design cuts down on wind resistance, which in turn helps improve fuel economy.

Aerodynamic designs may be obvious on sports cars, but they're also used on pickup trucks, where engineers face the complicated task of adding wind-cheating tricks without sacrificing work-oriented practicality.

"Air flows over a vehicle, around the side and under it, and you're trying to make it flow smoothly," says Jeff Luke, executive chief engineer for global trucks at General Motors. "If the air is turbulent, it results in more drag and it's less efficient aerodynamically."

A truck may have an upright grille and stance, but "that doesn't mean it's a brick," Luke says. The bumper and its lower air deflector, and the hood and windshield designs channel air around the truck. Headlights and fog lights are sealed so they deflect the air, instead of trapping it.

Air has to enter the grille to cool the engine, but the engine compartment is designed so the air flows out again, instead of pushing against the firewall.

Under the truck, engineers add body pans, which keep the air flowing so it doesn't create turbulence against the undercarriage components. If it swirls, it creates aerodynamic drag. This prevents the truck from easily moving forward and requires more fuel to overcome.

Air also has to move smoothly along the sides, where the door handles and window seals play a

Even under the vehicle must be aerodynamically sound. JIL MCINTOSH

This truck doesn't look aerodynamic but it is due to its inner design. JIL MCINTOSH

Quoted

"If the air is turbulent, it results in more drag, and it's less efficient aerodynamically."

Jeff Luke, executive chief engineer for global trucks at General Motors
On the effects of wind hitting a vehicle.

Things to note

- Light. Body pans help reduce wind resistance under the vehicle but must be made of lightweight materials, since extra weight reduces fuel economy.
- Cover up. Adding a tonneau cover to a pickup truck can improve fuel economy by as much as a half-mile per gallon.
- Choose wisely. If you're towing a trailer, one with an angled front end will use less fuel than one with a flat face that pushes against the wind.
- Find a balance. A car that's too aerodynamic may not have enough headroom or visibility.

role. Windshield wipers and mirrors also have to be designed to reduce air swirling around them, which can create annoying wind noise at higher speeds. Even the wheels are designed with flush faces, instead of deep designs that can trap air.

At the rear, a lip on the tailgate helps direct airflow properly. Some people believe that driving with the tailgate down helps improve fuel economy but that's false, Luke says. Instead, the upright tailgate creates a pressure difference behind the cab. Air flows over this "air cushion," instead of swirling in the box and creating drag.

"It's all 'free' fuel economy," Luke says. "The more you focus on every count of aerodynamic drag, the lower you can make it, and so the more fuel you can save."

Exhausted by your noisy tail pipe?

Auto Know. The patented Corsa design is eliminating the drone and promoting an all-round quieter driving experience

wheelbasemedia.ca

Ask anyone. Spending money on a new exhaust system is mostly about the sound. If you pick up a bit of extra power, that's just a bonus.

But it's also risky business for buyers with hundreds of dollars or maybe even $1,000-$1,500 on the line.

It took 2007 Mustang GT owner Gilles Belliveau many months to make up his mind and all the usual questions came into play. The most important, even ahead of price: will it have the right sound?

It's a very personal "style" sort of thing, and to make matters worse, buyers can't really hear, exactly, how a new system will sound until after it has been bought, shipped and put on the car. But by then there is no turning back if you made the wrong choice: you're stuck with it.

"You can listen to cars on Youtube.com with the same system you want, or hear sound clips at the websites of some companies but you just don't really know for sure how it will sound until it's on your car," says Belliveau, an investment manager who routinely takes his Mustang on weekend road trips.

Belliveau twists the key of the blue convertible and the 4.6-litre-V8 rips a tinny cackle and pops a few times before settling into a pleasant "blub, blub, blub."

"I love it. It's perfect."

Perfect sound in this case has an interesting twist. In fact, it's the lack of sound that's so impressive with this Corsa-brand system.

Cruising down the freeway in the passenger seat, you soon realize that the exhaust is not making any sound ... at all. Even less than the factory exhaust.

"It's quiet when it needs to be."

No kidding.

Crack the throttle and it comes to life. Settle back into cruise mode and there's

Quoted

"I love it, it's perfect. It's quiet when it needs to be and no drone at all."

2007 Mustang GT owner Gilles Belliveau reacted positively to the installation of a new Corsa exhaust on his vehicle just the rush of wind.

"See, there's no drone at all." Ah, yes, the dreaded five-letter "D" word.

It might seem like a small deal but a droning exhaust can become incredibly annoying as it drowns out conversation and the stereo, both of which require elevated volume levels to be heard. And pardon the pun but a droning exhaust system is just plain exhausting.

It's bad enough that you run the risk of drone — or, major drone — when you buy an expensive upgraded exhaust system, but sometimes even the factory that built your car doesn't always get it right. Owners of the V6 Camaro might know this feeling. Wheelbase Media's recent testing found the car enjoyable but that it also exhibited a tiring low-frequency exhaust drone at highway speeds.

By contrast, Craig Kohrs' kids can sleep in the back of his full-size sport-utility vehicle and not be woken up by the Corsa exhaust system.

"In fact, I'm doing 20 mph and talking to you on my Bluetooth phone."

And he's clear as a bell for this interview with no exhaust system killing the call.

Kohrs just happens to be vice president and general manager of TMG Performance Products, which manages the Corsa brand.

So, how does the company do it? Where many mufflers use a series of internal bends, baffles and packing, such as fibreglass, to muffle the exhaust noise, a Corsa system is a totally different animal.

Look in one end of the muffler and you can see straight out the other, which makes you wonder how it could be so quiet. And then you pick it up. Watch your back. The heft of a Corsa muffler is due to a myriad of small chambers that completely cancel out sound at certain frequencies. Thus, no highway

With half the job done on the Mustang GT (above) the Corsa muffler on the right is more compact and looks more finished than the stock unit. ALL IMAGES WHEELBASE

"(Corsa staff are) energetic, passionate ... most of the people here love what we do ... they're into the whole driving experience."

On his staff's dedication to their jobs.

drone. It's patented technology that the company has been perfecting since 1998.

Where other companies offer systems that fit certain cars, they'll often use the same basic muffler from car to car.

With Corsa, there are no generic systems as each vehicle has its own unique set of frequencies. There's even a system specifically tuned for that V6 Camaro and one for the latest 662-horsepower Mustang Shelby GT500.

Wow, that was fast.

"If we put all our resources on a project, development time is as fast as 30 days," says Kohrs.

Like most companies that think fast and sweat the small details, a tight development loop and a good product depends on the people.

"(Corsa staff are) energetic, passionate ... most of the people here love what we do ... they're into the whole driving experience."

The systems are made of high-grade stainless steel to last the life of the vehicle and most bolt in with simple hand tools.

Kohrs says that a typical Corsa system for the Chevrolet Corvette — which is a large market — can be installed in just seven minutes. None of this all-day-long business.

It took a little longer for us with Belliveau's Mustang but 30 minutes is still respectable for this axle-back exhaust-system change.

As for power, some basic stopwatch testing averaged 15 sprints in third gear from 3,000-5,500 rpm, before and after the exhaust change. The improvement was about three tenths of a second (8.6 seconds with Corsa versus 8.9 with the stock exhaust).

Regardless of the watch, "It definitely feels stronger," says Belliveau, "and the engine used to rattle and ping a bit ... that's gone."

According to Kohrs, Belliveau is just getting going as the Corsa system really begins to show its worth when intake breathing is improved, either with a cold-air intake or even with a supercharger or turbocharger.

Belliveau has plans for more upgrades but he's still wowed by a system that seems to have defied conventional exhaust wisdom.

There's just one problem. Thanks to Corsa, there are fewer stares from the opposite sex. Well, sort of. "I can't really tell, actually ... I drive by them too fast now."

Corsa have also made a muffler exhaust for the once-droning Camaro

The patented and very successful Corsa exhaust muffler design.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

If you are honest about what it is you desire then a friend will be honest with you about whether they can give it to you. Even if they can't, they may still be able to put you in touch with someone who can.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

It may seem as if you are out of step, logically and emotionally, with those around you. Maybe you are, but what of it? You are entitled to look at life any way you please.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Not everyone cares about what you care about, and why should they? All you need to realize is that one good person — that's you — can make a world of difference.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

The road you're travelling may not be of your own choosing but fate in its wisdom has pushed you in this direction so you would be wise not to fight against it. Worry less and life will be less of a struggle.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Others may be urging you to take a certain course of action but if your instincts tell you it's wrong then it's your instincts you must follow. It doesn't matter that you are unpopular, it matters only that you are right.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Before you get more of what you desire, it might be wise to create space by getting rid of what you no longer need. Why hold on to things you will most likely never use again?

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

What you think is a problem is in fact an opportunity in disguise. When you realize it, your mood will lighten and new opportunities will open up for you. You will soon be smiling.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The situation you face today is the same situation you faced yesterday. So why have you still not resolved it? Come on, you're a Scorpio. You're meant to be smart and decisive!

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Be careful what you ask for over the next 24 hours because you are likely to get it, but not in quite the way you expected. Come the eclipse in your sign this weekend, you may even want to give it back again.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

It would appear that you are involved in a feud and it is taking up far too much of your time and energy. Whatever it is about, you must get over it quickly. There are more important things to focus on.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Don't just assume that loved ones know how you feel. Tell them in words that make it impossible for them not to understand. Sometimes you can be a bit too cool.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

At home and at work you will get the chance to do good deeds today. Some of those who need your assistance may not be your favourite people but you'll help them anyway. SALLY BROMPTON
